

Art Workers Guild

project	Art Workers Guild
location	Queen Square, London
client	Art Workers Guild, London
dates	1999-present
cost	£1million

Long & Kentish was chosen to work on the project because of the care in detailing that the practice had displayed.

The project consists of a new reorganisation of the existing accommodation of the Art Workers Guild headquarters building in Queen Square, London. It is designed to take the guild into the new century.

A glazed extension is proposed to link various refurbished parts and to provide additional foyer space to the large meeting room at the rear of the grade-II listed Georgian terraced former house.
